Shock Knife “Putting Experience in Training”

If you're serious about taking training to the next level and having students REALLY listen to you, the Shock Knife is a must have for your CERT Unit. Although to the untrained eye, its appearance looks innocuous enough, when you handle this incredible tool you'll quickly appreciate its design and features. The Shock Knife is an ingenious electronic stun training device that has real current in the blade area. The voltage can be set to very minimal shock or set to the maximum voltage flow.

Why is this important and how can these devices help a CERT Trainer? Just one shock from this device and you will quickly have the attention of the students. Students will listen to every word that comes out of your mouth because they will not want to make a mistake in the tactics you are teaching. For Cell Extraction Teams, this device is an absolute must! Save your money with all the other tools and put this device in your budget for next year.

This device has been tested for the last three months in two different countries and in strategic locations within the US among CERT Level 2 – 4 teams. This device is also being evaluated in other confidential tactical operations. For full details, request your evaluation at <mailto:Evaluation@certops.com>

Although not cheap, this device will pay itself off after your first training session.
